ATTENTION:	Food Service Directors
FROM:	School Nutrition Programs
SUBJECT:	1999-2000 Attendance Factor
REFERENCE:	USDA All Points Bulletin SP-99-20; Management Bulletin (MB) 98-115; MB 97-117; MB 96-118

This management bulletin provides the 1999-2000 attendance factor as determined by the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA).

BACKGROUND

USDA requires school nutrition program sponsors to perform daily meal count edit checks using an "attendance factor." Section 210.2 of the National School Lunch Program regulations defines the attendance factor as "a percentage . . . which accounts for the difference between enrollment and attendance" (i.e., the percentage of enrolled students typically in school on any given day). Meal counts in each eligibility category (paid, reduced price, and free) must be compared to the number of enrolled children in each category times the attendance factor.

1999-2000 ATTENDANCE FACTOR

USDA has announced that the 1999-2000 National Attendance Factor is 91.6 percent, based on the latest data available from the U.S. Department of Education. This attendance factor must be used by school food authorities (SFAs) in computing their daily meal count edits. Effective with the July 1999 claim month, SFAs must use the 91.6 percent attendance factor for each site's daily meal count edits prior to the submission of monthly reimbursement claims. As in prior years, SFAs may develop their own attendance factors using data applied either to the schools served by them or to individual sites. The California Department of Education will apply the 91.6 percent attendance factor to the meal count edits performed on all claims submitted for reimbursement.

Attached to this bulletin are two sample Daily Meal Count Edit Work Sheets. The first sample work sheet (Attachment 1) allows a school site to compute daily free, reduced price, and paid category numbers for comparison against their actual daily meal counts. The second sample work sheet (Attachment 2) may be used to compile monthly meal count edits for either traditional or year round school sites. SFAs may use either or both of these work sheets, or may develop or modify work sheets of their own.

While the use of any sample work sheet is optional, documentation of the edit checks is required. At a minimum, the edit checks must incorporate the data identified on these samples.
